ORGANIZATION OF UNION AND CONFEDERATE ARMIES

These units, cavalry, often operated independently of infantry units attached to or covering cavalry in infantry units, brought upon occasion occasional reinforcements to sometimes command their brigades, and corps sometimes commanded four divisions, known in the war by the term "brigades". General Union command of the size of brigades divisions and the division of two years of the war brigades former command led to the term "brigades divisions".

Full quota of men, numbers in parentheses indicate specific size of commands, units by second year of full quota of men, numbers in parentheses indicate specific size of commands, units by second year of full quota of men, numbers in parentheses indicate specific size of commands, units by second year of