By Kelley Mayo

Six UNC history students debated the legality of Civil War-era secession at a lecture in the University Center.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, prepared arguments from the students and speechifies from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.

By Kayloni Wyatt

On April 18, 2017, the 150th anniversary of the Civil War began with the Battle of Shiloh, an event that marked the beginning of the war.

The event, called “Was Secession Legal?”, featured prepared arguments from the students and speeches from two professors. Three students represented the Southern states that seceded before the Civil War, and addressed the logic, ethics and vitality in those states’ field of business, politics, sexuality and others to present their research and work.

Papers are open to the Institute during the year and are accepted and accepted up this semester.

The next roadside cleanup event is 10 am. The students will meet in front of Beryl’s. People are encouraged to invite friends to join and spread the word.

The event is a way to give back to the community, and contribute to the health and safety of others. Students are welcome to join at any time and be a part of this event.

The event is open to anyone interested in volunteering and making a difference in the community. It is a great opportunity to get involved and make a positive impact.

The Pine Needle is a student-run newspaper and is printed twice a month.

The Pine Needle is supported by student fees and is printed twice a month.