A new program to have the ‘write’ stuff

By Chantel Moore
Staff Writer

A lot of organizations on campus have been working hard planning one of the university’s highlighted functions that takes place on Sept. 28. This year’s event will be the women’s volleyball team playing Catamounts in the Jameson at the Jones Health and Physical Education Building. If the UNC Brave women’s volleyball team will be playing Tusculum College Pirates on Oct. 8 at 2 p.m. on Lambeau Guar- anty Bank Field.

The campus-wide event named “Al Norte El Sur” is sponsored by the Student Involvement and Leadership Program, as well as the Student Involvement and Leadership Program. Dr. Jeffrey Lucas of the history department will give a brief talk to open up the event. Following Dr. Lucas’ opening address, there will be a screening of a 20-minute short documentary about the history of immigration to Robeson County. Dr. Lucas will also be available to answer questions about the event and information about the program – the Department of History and the 2+2 program.

Students will also be provided with a complimentary meal, as well as an opportunity to be active in the community and possibly even become a mentor to a student. The event will promote 2+2, a new program that can lead to college-level work and a new project. The new Academic Dept. of the College of Arts and Sciences created the 2+2 Program this semester with the goal of connecting students and faculty who can help them through their college careers. The Dr. Mark Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada said he will go to the “Al Norte El Sur” art exhibit with Dr. Jeff Lucas of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.

Dr. Canada explained that as part of the program a UNC faculty member would invite a colleague and two students to an event on campus. He said that by doing this, the faculty members and students could build the comfort and trust with students, and the students receive confidants in their major.

The acting dean has already approached colleagues and students for several events this semester. He went to the year’s first science seminar with Dr. Meredith Storms of the history department and two of her stu- dents. He also went to a Colloquium on Sept. 16 with Dr. Scott Billingsey of the history department and a student.