The UNCP volleyball roster is generally littered with players from across North Carolina, with the occasional few that come from outside the state.

The past several years, that same roster has started to see a sprinkling of out-of-state players from areas such as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. Everything stayed on the East coast.

With the addition of freshman Hannah Hill and Chelsea Phillips, UNCP has made its way out West. Or at least players have found a home stayed on the East coast.

such as Pennsylvania, Ohio state players from areas, and Florida. Everything to see a sprinkling of out-of-

The past several years, with players from across the state. The UNCP volleyball B y Nick Phillips

8B  THE PINE NEEDLE VOLLEYBALL OCTOBER 13, 2011

By Nick Phillips

By Nick Phillips

HATERS' HOMETOWN

Discussion on hate and the nature of hate itself through a multimedia presentation. October 26th 7 pm - 10 pm

PHOTO BY NICK PHILLIPS

Arizona native Chelsea Phillips powers up for a kill.

Described by Jonathan Begley as the West Coast Duo, Hill and Phillips both have potential to go to the conference tournament.

For Hill, whose hometown of Ventura, Calif., is only a few hours drive away, the fast-paced life moves at too slow a pace.

“In the end, it all comes down to PBIC play and getting to the conference tournament. Right now we still have our good days and our bad days, but we have to keep on having good days," Phillips said.

“Because when we are on, we win," Hill quickly added.

“Now we know how people play and what they like to do. At the beginning of the season that was all new to us, trying to figure out how everyone on the team played and their styles," Hill said.

“We've adjusted to everything now," Phillips added.

And no matter what coast you're from or how far from home you are, playing well is something easily universal anywhere.

The UNCP volleyball coach is generally littered with players from across North Carolina, with the occasional few that come from outside the state.

The past several years, that same roster has started to see a sprinkling of out-of-state players from areas such as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. Everything stayed on the East coast.

With the addition of freshmen Hannah Hill and Chelsea Phillips, UNCP has made its way out West. Or at least players have found a home.

such as Pennsylvania, Ohio state players from areas, and Florida. Everything to see a sprinkling of out-of-

The past several years, with players from across the state. The UNCP volleyball B y Nick Phillips

8B  THE PINE NEEDLE VOLLEYBALL OCTOBER 13, 2011

By Nick Phillips

By Nick Phillips

HATERS' HOMETOWN

Discussion on hate and the nature of hate itself through a multimedia presentation. October 26th 7 pm - 10 pm

PHOTO BY NICK PHILLIPS

Arizona native Chelsea Phillips powers up for a kill.

Described by Jonathan Begley as the West Coast Duo, Hill and Phillips both have potential to go to the conference tournament.

For Hill, whose hometown of Ventura, Calif., is only a few hours drive away, the fast-paced life moves at too slow a pace.

“In the end, it all comes down to PBIC play and getting to the conference tournament. Right now we still have our good days and our bad days, but we have to keep on having good days," Phillips said.

“Because when we are on, we win," Hill quickly added.

“Now we know how people play and what they like to do. At the beginning of the season that was all new to us, trying to figure out how everyone on the team played and their styles," Hill said.

“We've adjusted to everything now," Phillips added.

And no matter what coast you're from or how far from home you are, playing well is something easily universal anywhere.

The UNCP volleyball coach is generally littered with players from across North Carolina, with the occasional few that come from outside the state.

The past several years, that same roster has started to see a sprinkling of out-of-state players from areas such as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. Everything stayed on the East coast.

With the addition of freshmen Hannah Hill and Chelsea Phillips, UNCP has made its way out West. Or at least players have found a home.

such as Pennsylvania, Ohio state players from areas, and Florida. Everything to see a sprinkling of out-of-

The past several years, with players from across the state. The UNCP volleyball B y Nick Phillips

8B  THE PINE NEEDLE VOLLEYBALL OCTOBER 13, 2011

By Nick Phillips

By Nick Phillips

HATERS' HOMETOWN

Discussion on hate and the nature of hate itself through a multimedia presentation. October 26th 7 pm - 10 pm

PHOTO BY NICK PHILLIPS

Arizona native Chelsea Phillips powers up for a kill.

Described by Jonathan Begley as the West Coast Duo, Hill and Phillips both have potential to go to the conference tournament.

For Hill, whose hometown of Ventura, Calif., is only a few hours drive away, the fast-paced life moves at too slow a pace.

“In the end, it all comes down to PBIC play and getting to the conference tournament. Right now we still have our good days and our bad days, but we have to keep on having good days," Phillips said.

“Because when we are on, we win," Hill quickly added.

“Now we know how people play and what they like to do. At the beginning of the season that was all new to us, trying to figure out how everyone on the team played and their styles," Hill said.

“We've adjusted to everything now," Phillips added.

And no matter what coast you're from or how far from home you are, playing well is something easily universal anywhere.

The UNCP volleyball coach is generally littered with players from across North Carolina, with the occasional few that come from outside the state.

The past several years, that same roster has started to see a sprinkling of out-of-state players from areas such as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. Everything stayed on the East coast.

With the addition of freshmen Hannah Hill and Chelsea Phillips, UNCP has made its way out West. Or at least players have found a home.

such as Pennsylvania, Ohio state players from areas, and Florida. Everything to see a sprinkling of out-of-

The past several years, with players from across the state. The UNCP volleyball B y Nick Phillips

8B  THE PINE NEEDLE VOLLEYBALL OCTOBER 13, 2011

By Nick Phillips

By Nick Phillips

HATERS' HOMETOWN

Discussion on hate and the nature of hate itself through a multimedia presentation. October 26th 7 pm - 10 pm

PHOTO BY NICK PHILLIPS

Arizona native Chelsea Phillips powers up for a kill.

Described by Jonathan Begley as the West Coast Duo, Hill and Phillips both have potential to go to the conference tournament.

For Hill, whose hometown of Ventura, Calif., is only a few hours drive away, the fast-paced life moves at too slow a pace.

“In the end, it all comes down to PBIC play and getting to the conference tournament. Right now we still have our good days and our bad days, but we have to keep on having good days," Phillips said.

“Because when we are on, we win," Hill quickly added.

“Now we know how people play and what they like to do. At the beginning of the season that was all new to us, trying to figure out how everyone on the team played and their styles," Hill said.

“We've adjusted to everything now," Phillips added.

And no matter what coast you're from or how far from home you are, playing well is something easily universal anywhere.

The UNCP volleyball coach is generally littered with players from across North Carolina, with the occasional few that come from outside the state.

The past several years, that same roster has started to see a sprinkling of out-of-state players from areas such as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. Everything stayed on the East coast.

With the addition of freshmen Hannah Hill and Chelsea Phillips, UNCP has made its way out West. Or at least players have found a home.

such as Pennsylvania, Ohio state players from areas, and Florida. Everything to see a sprinkling of out-of-

The past several years, with players from across the state. The UNCP volleyball B y Nick Phillips

8B  THE PINE NEEDLE VOLLEYBALL OCTOBER 13, 2011

By Nick Phillips

By Nick Phillips

HATERS' HOMETOWN

Discussion on hate and the nature of hate itself through a multimedia presentation. October 26th 7 pm - 10 pm

PHOTO BY NICK PHILLIPS

Arizona native Chelsea Phillips powers up for a kill.

Described by Jonathan Begley as the West Coast Duo, Hill and Phillips both have potential to go to the conference tournament.

For Hill, whose hometown of Ventura, Calif., is only a few hours drive away, the fast-paced life moves at too slow a pace.

“In the end, it all comes down to PBIC play and getting to the conference tournament. Right now we still have our good days and our bad days, but we have to keep on having good days," Phillips said.

“Because when we are on, we win," Hill quickly added.

“Now we know how people play and what they like to do. At the beginning of the season that was all new to us, trying to figure out how everyone on the team played and their styles," Hill said.

“We've adjusted to everything now," Phillips added.

And no matter what coast you're from or how far from home you are, playing well is something easily universal anywhere.

The UNCP volleyball coach is generally littered with players from across North Carolina, with the occasional few that come from outside the state.

The past several years, that same roster has started to see a sprinkling of out-of-state players from areas such as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Florida. Everything stayed on the East coast.

With the addition of freshmen Hannah Hill and Chelsea Phillips, UNCP has made its way out West. Or at least players have found a home.

such as Pennsylvania, Ohio state players from areas, and Florida. Everything to see a sprinkling of out-of-

The past several years, with players from across the state. The UNCP volleyball B y Nick Phillips

8B  THE PINE NEEDLE VOLLEYBALL OCTOBER 13, 2011

By Nick Phillips

By Nick Phillips

HATERS' HOMETOWN

Discussion on hate and the nature of hate itself through a multimedia presentation. October 26th 7 pm - 10 pm

PHOTO BY NICK PHILLIPS

Arizona native Chelsea Phillips powers up for a kill.

Described by Jonathan Begley as the West Coast Duo, Hill and Phillips both have potential to go to the conference tournament.

For Hill, whose hometown of Ventura, Calif., is only a few hours drive away, the fast-paced life moves at too slow a pace.

“In the end, it all comes down to PBIC play and getting to the conference tournament. Right now we still have our good days and our bad days, but we have to keep on having good days," Phillips said.

“Because when we are on, we win," Hill quickly added.

“Now we know how people play and what they like to do. At the beginning of the season that was all new to us, trying to figure out how everyone on the team played and their styles," Hill said.

“We've adjusted to everything now," Phillips added.

And no matter what coast you're from or how far from home you are, playing well is something easily universal anywhere.