The legacy of Strike at the Wind still lives

By Marlo Fulmore

The legend of Henry Berry Lowry, the Lumbee bandit, and his fights for freedom is well known around Robeson County. The story is instilled in the hearts of Lumbee people. The fight to get the recognition he so much deserved is still evident today as the Lumbee Tribe fights for Federal recognition.

“Henry Berry Lowry is a Lumbee man and his Lowry story, the spirit of one of the most courageous men that has ever lived in Robeson County, N.C., is still evident today.”

Henry Berry Lowry lived on the banks of the Lumber River.

Mary Nortom, author of the book “Henry Berry Lowry,” writes, “He filied his way out of the grated iron window bars, escaped to the woods with handcuffs on, and made his way back to his wife in Scuffletown [Pembroke].”

Morris Lowry, one of many Lumbee men, was rounded up by the Home Guard and put in the county jail.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

By Scott Pachilis

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.

The final entry of the Henry Berry Lowry story is the 11th of April, 1865. Pride and the desire to control and push for what he believes in remains as the Lumbee Legend.

For the Lumbee people, the Lowry story is instilled in children.