A unique performance of classical and foreign music was presented at the Moore Hall auditorium on Feb. 7.

The two-man performance, titled “Worlds Together,” treated the audience to an enlightening concert that cohesively blended the genres of Persian and Western classical music.

A mixture of sounds made for an original music experience like any seen on this campus.

The talent of the performers was exceeded only by the knowledge each had in their respective styles of music.

Dr. Ken Hoppman displayed expert proficiency at performing Western classical music.

And a female student from non student was towed from the vehicle and her license was revoked on Feb. 4.

Both students were contacted in reference to harassment she has been receiving from a past relationship.

The victim states she is being harassed through MySpace and text messages. A campus violation has been issued.

A non student was pulled over for a traffic offense and further investigation revealed no insurance on the vehicle and his driving license was revoked on Feb. 4.

The vehicle driven by the non student was towed off campus.

By Kayloni Wyatt

Accompanied by Dr. Parast, in 2002 he began a business professor of Dr. Parast's and teaches operations management at UNCP. This will be his second year teaching at the university.

Dr. Parast also has extensive experience as an artist. He said he has been playing Persian music since 1988 as a small boy growing up in India. They also explained how they came to know one another.

Dr. Parast, in 2002 during his doctoral studies at The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, offered to perform traditional Persian music in one of Dr. Hoppman's classes.

It was after this class the two artists got to know one another and came up with the idea of combining the two genres to create a new sound.

The “Worlds Together” performance not only showcased the skill level of both artists, but the level of respect the artists have for each other's style of music.

Music is obviously an influential part of both these talented artists' lives. When asked if there are any other types of music Dr. Parast studies as an artist, he responded, “This is much more than just a hobby.”

On Jan. 22, two students were contacted in reference to underage alcohol consumption of a student at Village Apartments.

A student from UNCP North Carolina at Pembroke was cited for communicating threats. The warrant was served and a court date is pending.

The incident took place while the students were being investigated for a traffic violation.

Another student was charged on Jan. 25 with underage consumption of alcohol at Village Apartments.

A female student from another university was charged with a controlled substance violation.

Also included in the e-mail, University Police were contacted in reference of two students who had a verbal altercation at Village Apartments on Jan. 27. The victim went to the magistrate’s office to obtain a warrant for communicating threats.

The incident involved consumption of alcohol on Jan. 23. The incident took place while the students were being investigated for a traffic violation.

Another student was charged on Jan. 25 with underage consumption of alcohol at Village Apartments.

A female student from North Carolina at Pembroke was cited for communicating threats. The warrant was served and a court date is pending.

On Feb. 3, a female student contacted University Police in reference to harassment she has been receiving from a past relationship.

The victim states she is being harassed through MySpace and text messages. A campus violation has been issued.

A non student was pulled over for a traffic offense and further investigation revealed no insurance on the vehicle and his driving license was revoked on Feb. 4.

The vehicle driven by the non student was towed off campus.

By Dean Stephens

Staff Writer

A unique performance of classical and foreign music was presented at the Moore Hall auditorium on Feb. 7.

The two-man performance, titled “Worlds Together,” treated the audience to an enlightening concert that cohesively blended the genres of Persian and Western classical music.

A mixture of sounds made for an original music experience like any seen on this campus.

The talent of the performers was exceeded only by the knowledge each had in their respective styles of music.

Dr. Ken Hoppman displayed expert proficiency at performing Western classical music.

And a female student from non student was towed from the vehicle and her license was revoked on Feb. 4.

Both students were contacted in reference to harassment she has been receiving from a past relationship.

The victim states she is being harassed through MySpace and text messages. A campus violation has been issued.

A non student was pulled over for a traffic offense and further investigation revealed no insurance on the vehicle and his driving license was revoked on Feb. 4.

The vehicle driven by the non student was towed off campus.

By Kayloni Wyatt

Accompanied by Dr. Parast, in 2002 he began a business professor of Dr. Parast's and teaches operations management at UNCP. This will be his second year teaching at the university.

Dr. Parast also has extensive experience as an artist. He said he has been playing Persian music since 1988 as a small boy growing up in India. They also explained how they came to know one another.

Dr. Parast, in 2002 during his doctoral studies at The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, offered to perform traditional Persian music in one of Dr. Hoppman's classes.

It was after this class the two artists got to know one another and came up with the idea of combining the two genres to create a new sound.

The “Worlds Together” performance not only showcased the skill level of both artists, but the level of respect the artists have for each other's style of music.

Music is obviously an influential part of both these talented artists' lives. When asked if there are any other types of music Dr. Parast studies as an artist, he responded, “This is much more than just a hobby.”

On Jan. 22, two students were contacted in reference to underage alcohol consumption of a student at Village Apartments.

A student from UNCP North Carolina at Pembroke was cited for communicating threats. The warrant was served and a court date is pending.

The incident took place while the students were being investigated for a traffic violation.

Another student was charged on Jan. 25 with underage consumption of alcohol at Village Apartments.

A female student from another university was charged with a controlled substance violation.

Also included in the e-mail, University Police were contacted in reference of two students who had a verbal altercation at Village Apartments on Jan. 27. The victim went to the magistrate’s office to obtain a warrant for communicating threats.

The incident involved consumption of alcohol on Jan. 23. The incident took place while the students were being investigated for a traffic violation.

Another student was charged on Jan. 25 with underage consumption of alcohol at Village Apartments.

A female student from North Carolina at Pembroke was cited for communicating threats. The warrant was served and a court date is pending.

On Feb. 3, a female student contacted University Police in reference to harassment she has been receiving from a past relationship.

The victim states she is being harassed through MySpace and text messages. A campus violation has been issued.

A non student was pulled over for a traffic offense and further investigation revealed no insurance on the vehicle and his driving license was revoked on Feb. 4.

The vehicle driven by the non student was towed off campus.

By Kayloni Wyatt

Accompanied by Dr. Parast, in 2002 he began a business professor of Dr. Parast's and teaches operations management at UNCP. This will be his second year teaching at the university.

Dr. Parast also has extensive experience as an artist. He said he has been playing Persian music since 1988 as a small boy growing up in India. They also explained how they came to know one another.

Dr. Parast, in 2002 during his doctoral studies at The University of Nebraska-Lincoln, offered to perform traditional Persian music in one of Dr. Hoppman's classes.

It was after this class the two artists got to know one another and came up with the idea of combining the two genres to create a new sound.

The “Worlds Together” performance not only showcased the skill level of both artists, but the level of respect the artists have for each other's style of music.

Music is obviously an influential part of both these talented artists' lives. When asked if there are any other types of music Dr. Parast studies as an artist, he responded, “This is much more than just a hobby.”