SGA leaders want student involvement

By Colleen Stewart
Contributing Writer

UNCP Senior Zach Wondel can be found at the Mary Livermore Library throughout the week and almost every night.

"As a senior, it’s crucial that I get my work done and on time. The library is an excellent place to work constantly without it bothering me too much but I do have a need for its peaceful and relaxing atmosphere, it provides a sense of peace and quiet," he said.

Aside from the traditional reasons for going to the library, other students find the library as somewhat of a sanctuary. UNC-Chapman Stephanie DeFeo said she goes to the library not to complete school work, but rather to take a break from nightly assignments.

"Do my assignments in my room, but I like the atmosphere at the library and the overall feeling in the place. Most of the time I will buy a book off the shelf and it really is actually relaxing, just focusing on something that doesn’t bother me," she said.

New editors selected for student publications

continued from page 1A

and to having a great issue of the Indianahead in 2010," said Oswald.

Aureus magazine

The Student Publications Board select editor of the Aureus magazine and another group.

Dr. Karen Helgeson of the English and Theatre department advises the Aureus.

"I am delighted that Craig Wilson has been selected by the Student Publications Board to be editor of the Aureus for the 2009-2010 academic year. A key member of the staff for the past two years, Craig brings a wealth of experience to the position. I am especially excited about plans to increase the visibility of the Aureus on campus and to get more students involved in all aspects of the magazine—submitting their work for publication to helping with the magazine production. I know that Craig will be an excellent editor and leader; I am looking forward to working with him this school year," Dr. Helgeson said.

Technology can’t replace library’s atmosphere

By Colleen Stewart
Contributing Writer

UNCP Senior Zach Wondel can be found at the Mary Livermore Library throughout the week and almost every night.

"As a senior, it’s crucial that I get my work done and on time. The library is an excellent place to work constantly without it bothering me too much but I do have a need for its peaceful and relaxing atmosphere, it provides a sense of peace and quiet," he said.

Aside from the traditional reasons for going to the library, other students find the library as somewhat of a sanctuary. UNC-Chapman Stephanie DeFeo said she goes to the library not to complete school work, but rather to take a break from nightly assignments.

"Do my assignments in my room, but I like the atmosphere at the library and the overall feeling in the place. Most of the time I will buy a book off the shelf and it really is actually relaxing, just focusing on something that doesn’t bother me," she said.

International students celebrate Easter, find eggs

By Ryan Kong
Editor Intern

On April 12, 11 international students got together on the lawn outside of the international program office to attend the celebration of Easter.

Working with her in our first year and encourage students to voice their opinions and let them know what’s on their minds.

"I want the students to know that the SGA is here for them. I want want students to realize that the SGA will never be effective without their support. So for next year, or for the last few days of class, even for the summer, I want the students to approach the SGA with the confidence in their concerns and suggestions.

The SGA office is located in the second floor of the T. C. Chapin University Center, also we have a website: http://www.uncp.edu/sga.

“The most important part of any relationship is to have students to effectively be able to communicate with the SGA, and vice versa. I feel that this year, the students have been approaching the SGA, but not as much as we would have liked. The more students come to us, the more the SGA can help the governance of the University. Personally, I want our students to know that they have the power to bring change into UNCP, to improve school life.

By Colleen Stewart
Contributing Writer

UNCP Senior Zach Wondel can be found at the Mary Livermore Library throughout the week and almost every night.

"As a senior, it’s crucial that I get my work done and on time. The library is an excellent place to work constantly without it bothering me too much but I do have a need for its peaceful and relaxing atmosphere, it provides a sense of peace and quiet," he said.

Aside from the traditional reasons for going to the library, other students find the library as somewhat of a sanctuary. UNC-Chapman Stephanie DeFeo said she goes to the library not to complete school work, but rather to take a break from nightly assignments.

"Do my assignments in my room, but I like the atmosphere at the library and the overall feeling in the place. Most of the time I will buy a book off the shelf and it really is actually relaxing, just focusing on something that doesn’t bother me," she said.

International students celebrate Easter, find eggs

By Ryan Kong
Editor Intern

On April 12, 11 international students got together on the lawn outside of the international program office to attend the celebration of Easter.

Working with her in our first year and encourage students to voice their opinions and let them know what’s on their minds.

"I want the students to know that the SGA is here for them. I want want students to realize that the SGA will never be effective without their support. So for next year, or for the last few days of class, even for the summer, I want the students to approach the SGA with the confidence in their concerns and suggestions.

The SGA office is located in the second floor of the T. C. Chapin University Center, also we have a website: http://www.uncp.edu/sga.

“The most important part of any relationship is to have students to effectively be able to communicate with the SGA, and vice versa. I feel that this year, the students have been approaching the SGA, but not as much as we would have liked. The more students come to us, the more the SGA can help the governance of the University. Personally, I want our students to know that they have the power to bring change into UNCP, to improve school life.